Monday

My dear Brother In consequence of a long conversation I had with the Garter concerning Mary Anne I think you with these few lines as he is anxious I should take the earliest opportunity of representing to you his feelings on her subject & as I have desired him to give you this letter himself perhaps you will have the kindness to talk the matter over with him & should you be of the same opinion I would be a great comfort to him pursuing all your kindness & deeply impressed with the gratitude as he is for the unbounded favour he and

His children have ever received from your mother since the more dependent to explain his mother about his daughter The looking forwards to her being one of Charlotte's attendants is most gratifying to him and brings her more immediately under his own eye, ~~and~~ a proof that you are satisfied with her conduct in her trying situation about your Amalia - but it strikes Goshen the King having been so good as to promise to make every Anne one of his Penions that it would be more respectful of his

of him but to let Mary Anne know to father Anne or Patrick Anne till she King is in a situation to be informed of his future plans for his daughter & of your kind intentions towards her - It will prove to the King his gratitude by accepting of his new situation until his Majesty has approved of it I have promised as long as Mary Anne remains at the castle to be her friend & keep her as far in employment in speaking properly that she shall not lose her time of course if you still are of opinion that she had better go to Charlotte without loss of time you have not to say she is at your command as you understand it is but Goshen's work she should and blame to Charlotte in time only she feels a delusion in her learning the ^{steps} ~~steps~~ and the heavy burden ^{is} ~~is~~ ^{is} ~~is~~ depressed with it.

I have not time for more but must put any that strikes me things go on much as when I saw you last night, but under great delusion at times, I hope to see you soon Guloffe
