

I June 1765

His health.

Sent for him on purpose to prevent his taking y^e trouble of coming to Court having been extremely sorry to see him do it before.

Another motive also desiring to entrust him with a business of great consequence the Regency; directed my servants to consider of it & took for granted no honest man but would be pleased wth y^e mark of my love for y^e Country.

According as I shall express himself an opportunity taken to observe y^t. I see with pleasure y^e. Seats & animosities so long subsisting on y^e. decline, wish for nothing more y^e to see people of consequence behave in such a manner as might justify me in giving them a share of the Crown favours, which might be the easier done as I have not reason to be satisfied with some of y^e. people I employ

[Faint, illegible handwritten text, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]